STATE COLLEGE!

Two Thousand People Assemble to Witness Impressive Exercises.

LIBRARY DEDICATED.

It is the Gift of Mr. Andrew Carnegie Who Was Present and Made an Address — Mr. Charles M. Schwab Also Present Gave Some Very Good Advice.

THE GOVERNOR ALSO ATTENDED.

About 1000 persons, composed of the school teachers who were here during the institute, as well as Bellefonters and others, attended the exercises of "Pennsylvania Day" in connection with which was the dedication of the Carnegie Library at State College Friday. During the time which was not occupied by the exercises all the College buildings were thrown open to the visitors, and a feeling of welcome and true hospitality was felt by all. The gallery of the immense auditorium was early filled with an expectant audience. Promply at 9:30 the student body, numbering from seven to eight hundred, marched in and occupied the floor. These were followed by the distinguished visitors and the College faculty, led by Dr. Atherton, who occupied the stage. During this time the College orchestra played a processional. This was followed by an invocation by Dr. Benjamin Gill. The Lord's Prayer was chanted by the College choir. The address by Mr. Thomas L. Montgomery, State Librarian, was a solid discourse touching on the formation and history of the State Libraries, and their relation to education. He gave as his belief, that the library system would not be complete until every town and hamlet had its own library, and until circulating libraries had been found for the benefit of persons residing in rural districts.

Following his discourse the College Glee Club rendered "The Lost Chord."

President Atherton in a short address informed the assemblage that the Rt. Hon. John Morley, from England was unable to be present. This was a disappointment to many. The Hon. Fred W. Fleitz then addressed the audience. His subject was "Pennsylvania," and he spoke in glowing terms of its glorious history, conveying the idea, that the young men who today are just starting their careers, will tomorrow be the men who will guide the destinies of the Commonwealth, and that, as they are receiving the very best preparation, the state, in the future will have as proud a history as in the past.

The students then sang with a will the song "Come Brothers, Raise the Song." Dr. Atherton then introduced His Excellency, Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker, who made a short address, in which he highly praised the efficiency of the College, and promised to remember it in the future as he had done in the past. Mr. Charles M. Schwab in a few brief remarks stated that he was very much disappointed at not being able to attend the dedicatory exercises of the Auditorium. He said that however intellectual a person may be, he cannot become highly cultured, without social intercourse with his fellows, and that he hoped that the students would mingle in the Auditorium and thus gain that indispensable culture necessary to a gentleman. With the superior training of the College man, and no sense of superiority socially to the graduate of the world's practical university, the workshop, he said, that the collegiate must excel. The morning exercises were then brought to a close by the rendering of "America." A sumptuous luncheon was served in the Armory, to the Board of Trustees, the class of '05 and specially invited guests.

At 2 o'clock the Carnegie Library was crowded to witness the dedication of that building. Mr. Andrew Carnegie made an address, praising universities at large, and State College in particular. At the conclusion of his speech he handed Gen. Beaver, as president of the board of trustees, a key, the symbol of the building. Gen. Beaver, then made a speech in which he gave the great need of State College for a library, and referred to Mr. Carnegie as a patron of the College, having before contributed to the institution. He then gave the key to Dr. Atherton as the one who should have the direct supervision of the building. Dr. Atherton then stated that by a unanimous vote of the students, they had decided to administer the affairs of the library on a system of honor. In order to show their appreciation of Mr. Carnegie's gift, the board of trustees presented him with a casket, having beautifully engraved features of the man, and a representation of the building upon it. He was also presented with resolutions of gratitude written upon parchment and tied with the school colors, blue and white. The scholars in order to show their appreciation also, chose Mr. Saunders, as spokesman for the day, who in a very creditable speech presented Mrs. Carnegie with a beautiful loving cup. She very graciously thanked the students for their gift. Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker then gave a few remarks for the benefit of any who may not have heard him in the morning.

EXTRACTS FROM THE ADDRESS OF GOV. PENNYPACKER.

I am here not at all to make an address but to be present with you upon this interesting occasion, to come for the first time to view your magnificent institution and its appointments, to unite with you young gentlemen in giving greeting to your generous and philanthropic guest and, last but by no means least, for the further reason that it is very difficult to resist the persuasiveness and persistency of your very distinguished President.

(Applause)

Every century has its own ideals. No age is like the past. We live in a time of materialism. We like to have things in the concrete. The contemplations of Plato and Socrates have been, to a very large extent, forgotten, the mysticism which characterized the theological thought of the middle ages has almost entirely disappeared and today, the thought of men is given to the rush of the locomotive across the oroad prairies, to the erection of great bridges, to the construction of factories where at one end is put in the naked ore and at the other end comes completed steel work, wire fences and all the appliances of machinery. This characterizes not only what you see about you everywhere but it has affected and will continue to affect our colleges and schools. Now, when a young man goes to a university, he not only expects to acquire some knowledge of Latin and Greek but he has an ambition to be a full man. And, in your colleges, while we have not neglected the languages, while we have not neglected culture, there is an effort everywhere to introduce manual training, to teach the eye and the hand in connection with the mind, to teach you men how they may better pursue agriculture, which lies at the foundation of all things, and mechanics which lies at the foundation of all modern progress.

I am anxious that you young men who are just starting out upon your careers should be imbued with that spirit which was mentioned by Mr. Fleitz in his fine address to which you have just listened—that you should properly appreciate the community in which you were born, that you should have due regard for that great commonwealth in which the most of you have been born and where all of you are getting that training which is to fit you for the work of your future lives. Every man must have his feet planted on the ground; every career and especially every successful career begins at home.

After speaking of the way in which Pennsylvania had been represented in all the different fields of human effort and BURNED TO DEATH AT SNOW SHOE!

Alvin Kinsloe Cremated in His Cabin Monday Night.

WAS 85 YEARS OLD.

An Aged Man With Both Legs Cut Off. He Lived Alone in Cabin---Was An Old Soldier and Widely Known.

EDWARD SWARTZ KILLED ON RAILROAD

Living alone in his little cabin on the outskirts of Snow Shoe town, an aged man, a cripple, met a terrible death by cremation Monday night. Alvin Kinsloe was the victim of this sad affair. He is 85 years of age, a veteran of the civil war and is well known throughout this section of the country. As stated above he lived all alone in his little cabin and having never married he had no family or friends to comfort him in his old age. The fire was discovered about midnight and in a short time the shanty was burned to the ground. The remains of the old man were found about fifty yards from the cabin burned to a crisp. It is the general supposition that he was smoking in bed and that the bed clothes caught fire and being a cripple he could not make his escape in time to avoid the flames.

Several years ago Kinsloe had both legs cut off at the knees in a railroad accident and by the means of canes he bobbled about the country. Most everybody in and about Snow Shoe and for miles around knew Alvin Kinsloe and his sad death will excite a great deal of sympathy for the lonely old man.

Very few people about the town knew of the fire until the cabin was burned down and to late to save Mr. Kinsloe.

DEATH OF EDWARD SWARTZ.

Edward Swartz, a son of John Swartz, of Milesburg, was killed at Curwensville Monday night about nine o'clock. Mr. Swartz was flagman on a freight train on the mountain road, when the accident occurred. They were in the act of moving a car by means of a long pole, the car being on one track and the engine on another. In some manner the pole slipped striking Swartz on the head and smashing his head to jelly, His death was almost instantaneous.

Swartz was married and lived at Curwensville. He is survived by his wife who was formerly Miss Bertie Way, of Snow Shoe Intersection, and two children. Also leaves a father John Swartz, of Milesburg, and one brother Ambrose Swartz, of Bellefonte,

Swartz was 35 years of age and will be buried at Milesburg.

Shot Bear from Automobile.

As the monotony of the camps of local hunters is now becoming so dense that it may be cut with a knife, a bear story out of the usual line, as told by the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin, may serve to bring temporary life back to their haciendas in the jungle. Here it is:

Thursday morning John B. Condon, of the Savoy, and Charles M. Gibson started for Elimsport in the latter's automobile, intending to spend several days in quest of wild turkeys. Their arms consisted of two Winchesters with the ammunition necessary for such a trip.

While traveling through the second range of the mountains and enjoying the beautiful scenery they were surprised on looking ahead several hundred yards to see an immense black bear coming down off the mountain side into the road and stand in an upright position. It didn't take bruin long to scent danger in the air and with a noise like a bass drum filled with clothes pins he started directly towards the occupants of the auto. The latter, no donbt, were as much surprised as was the bear. But knowing that something must be done and that something mighty quick, Gibson grabbed up the first gun he could conveniently reach and taking sight fired. His aim was perfect for his bearship dropped at the first report. A second shot was fired to make sure he was dead. Condon and his companion jumped out and placed the carcass in the auto and, deciding to abandon the turkey hunt, returned to the city. The animal was weighed and found to tip the scales at exactly 180 lbs.

CENTRE COUNTY SCHOOLS.

Among the actions taken during the recent County Teacher's Institute, which took place in Bellefonte, was the report of the Committee on Resolutions, the work of which was commented upon for brevity. In this brevity, however, the committee reported the following, which was unanimously adopted by the teachers with a ringing vote:

L. Gramley.

Hand Amputated.

Merchant O. T. Corman, of Spring Mills, while hunting along the base of Brush mountain on Friday last, met with a very unfortunate accident, and one, too, of a very serious character. In stepping down from a stump, he rested his hand over the muzzle of his gun, and the hammer coming in contact with some brush, or most likely the stump, immediately discharged, the load passing diagonally through his hand and wrist, splintering and tearing both in a fearful manner. On his arrival home Dr. Braucht was immediately summoned, who saw at once that amputation would be necessary. However the doctor telephoned a call to Dr. Musser at Aarcnsburg for a consultation. When that worthy gentleman arrived they both made a thorough examination, and soon discovered that nothing of the fractured hand could be saved, and that amputation would be necessary. The operation was performed the same evening. Mr. Corman is doing as well as could be expected.

U. S. Fish Hatchery Car In Bellefonte.

A special car from the Department of Commerce and Labor, Bureau of Fisheries, arrived in town Wednesday morning in charge of J. W. Johnson as Captain. Under Mr. Johnson are a messenger, Harry S. Venn, and assistant and a steward. Their headquarters are in Washington, D. C. The car is complete in every detail and the men eat and sleep aboard it. There are brook trout, black bass and rainbow trout in the car. The Sportsman's League of Centre County received a consignment of 27 cans of brook trout, about 5000 trout in all. They will be distributed about the streams in this vicinity.

The last stopping place of the car was Huntingdon and they go from here to Altoona. The fish are from the United States Fish Hatchery at White Sulphur, West Virginia.

Coming from Huntingdon here one of the journal's on the car broke square off and a serious accident was narrowly averted. The car will be repaired here before proceeding to Altoona.

Lookout For Him.

A stranger—evidently the same one who recently visited Allentown—visited a number of coal merchants at York, ordered a ton of pea coal from each, and gave in payment a check for 14.50, bearing the signature of Henry Brubaker, a well known contractor. He pocketed the change, and the scheme was not discovered until a lot of coal wagons lined up at the same address, given, to find no claimant for the coal.

her husband. But I did not stop to listen—I could not. I flew immediately to Miss Tuttle with the violent demand as to whether she knew that her sister was already a wife when she married me, and when she cried out, 'No!' and showed great dismay I broke forth with the dreadful tale and cowered in unmanly anguish at her feet and went mad and lost myself for a little while. Then I went back to my wretched wife and asked her how the awful deed had been done. She told me, and again I did not believe her and began to look upon it all as some wild dream of the distempered fancies of a disordered brain. This thought calmed me, and I spoke gently to her and even tried to take her hand. But she herself was raving now and clung about my knees murmuring words of such anguish and contrition that my worst fears returned and, only stopping to take the key of the Moore house from my bureau, I left the house and wandered madly—I know not where.

"I did not go back that day. I could not face her again till I knew how much of her confession was fancy and how much was fact. I roamed the streets, carrying that key from one end of the city to the other, and at night I used it to open the house which she had declared contained so dreadful a secret.

"I had bought candles on my way there but, forgetting to take them from the store, I had no light with which to penetrate the horrible place that even the moon refused to illumine. I realized this when once in, but would not go back. All I have told about using matches to light me to the southwest chamber is true, also my coming upon the old candelabrum there, with a candle in one of its sockets. This candle I lit, my sole reason for seeking this room being my desire to examine the antique sketch for the words which she had said could be found there.

"I had failed to bring a magnifying glass with me, but my eyes are phenomenally sharp. Knowing where to look, I was able to pick out enough words here and there in the lines composing the hair to feel quite sure that my wife had neither deceived me nor been deceived as to certain directions being embodied there in writing. Shaken in my last lingering hope, but not yet quite convinced that these words pointed to outrageous crime, I flew next to the closet and drew out the fatal drawer.

"You have been there and know what the place is, but no one but myself can ever realize what it was for me, still loving, still clinging to a wild inconsequent belief in my wife, to grope in that mouth of hell for the spring she had chattered about in her sleep, to find it, press it, and then to hear, down in the dark of the fearsome recess, the sound of something deadly strike against what I took to be the cushions of the old settle standing at the edge of the library hearthstone.

"I think I must have fainted, for when I found myself possessed of sufficient consciousness to withdraw from that hole of death the candle in the candelabrum was shorter by an inch than when I first thrust my head into the gap made by the removed drawers. In putting back the drawers I hit the candelabrum with my foot, upsetting it and throwing out the burning candle. As the flames began to lick the worm eaten boarding of the floor a momentary impulse seized me to rush away and leave the whole place to burn, but I did not. With a sudden frenzy I stamped out the flame and then, finding myself in darkness, groped my way downstairs and out. If I entered the library I do not remember it. Some lapses must be pardoned a man involved as I was."

"But the fact which you dismiss so lightly is an important one," insisted the major. "We must know positively whether you entered this room or not."

"I have no recollection of doing so."

"Then you cannot tell us whether the little table was standing there, with the candelabrum upon it or"—

"I can tell you nothing about it."

The major, after a long look at this suffering man, turned toward Miss Tuttle.

"You must have loved your sister very much," he sententiously remarked.

She flushed, and for the first time her eyes fell from their resting place on Mr. Jeffrey's face.

"I loved her reputation," was her quiet answer, "and"— The rest died in her throat.

But we all—such of us, I mean, who were possessed of the least sensibility or insight—knew how that sentence sounded as finished in her heart, "And I loved him who asked this sacrifice of me."

Yet was her conduct not quite clear.

"And to save that reputation you tied the pistol to her wrist?" insinuated the major.

"No," was her vehement reply. "I never knew what I was tying to her. My testimony in that regard was absolutely true. She held the pistol concealed in the folds of her dress. I did not dream—I could not—that she was contemplating any such end to the atrocious crime to which she had confessed. Her manner was too light, too airy and too frivolous—a manner adopted, as I now see, to forestall all questions and hold back all expressions of feeling on my part. 'Tie these hanging ends of ribbon to my wrist,' were her words. 'Tie them tight; a knot under and a bow on top. I am going out. There, don't say anything. What you want to talk about will keep till tomorrow. For one night more I am going to make merry—to—to enjoy myself.' She was laughing. I thought her horribly callous and trembled with such an unspeakable repulsion that I had difficulty in making the knot. To speak at all would have been impossible. Neither did I dare to look in her face. I was touching the hand that—and she kept on laughing—such a hollow laugh covering up such an awful resolve! When she turned to give me that last injunction about the note this resolve glared still in her eyes."

"And you never suspected?"

"Not for an instant. I did not do justice either to her misery or to her conscience. I fear that I have never done her justice in any way. I thought her light, pleasure loving. I did not know that it was assumed to hide a terrible secret."

"Then you had no knowledge of the contract she had entered into while a schoolgirl?"

"Not in the least. Another woman and not myself had been her confidant, a woman who has since died. No intimation of her first unfortunate marriage had ever reached me till Mr. Jeffrey rushed in upon me that Tuesday morning with her dreadful confession on his lips."

The district attorney, who did not seem quite satisfied on a certain point passed over by the major, now took the opportunity of saying:

"You assure us that you had no idea that this once light hearted sister of yours meditated suicide when she left you?"

"And I repeat it, sir."

"Then why did you immediately go to Mr. Jeffrey's drawer, where you could have no business, unless it was to see if she had taken his pistol with her?"

Miss Tuttle's head fell, and a soft flush broke through the pallor of her cheek.

"Because I was thinking of him; because I was terrified for him. He had left the house the morning before in a half maddened condition and had not come back to sleep or eat since. I did not know what a man so outraged in every sacred feeling of love and honor might be tempted to do. I thought of suicide. I remembered the old house and how he had said: 'I don't believe her. I don't believe she ever did so cold blooded an act or that any such dreadful machinery is in that house. I never shall believe it till I have seen and handled it myself. It is a nightmare, Cora. We are insane.' I thought of this, sirs, and when I went into her room to change the place of the little note in the book I went to his bureau drawer not to look for the pistol—I did not think of that then—but to see if the keys of the Moore house were still there. I knew that they were kept in this drawer, for I had been present in the room when they were brought in after the wedding. I had also been shortsighted enough to conclude that if they were gone it was he who had taken them. They were gone, and that was why I flew immediately from the house to the old place in Waverley avenue. I was concerned for Mr. Jeffrey. I feared to find him there, demented or dead."

"But you had no key."

"No; Mr. Jeffrey had taken one of them and my sister the other, but the lack of a key or even of a light, for the missing candles were not taken by me [we afterward found that these candles were never delivered at the house at all; that they had been placed in the wrong basket and left in a neighboring kitchen], could not keep me at home after I was once convinced that he had gone to this dreadful house. If I could not get in I could at least hammer at the door or rouse the neighbors. Something must be done. I did not think what; I merely flew."

"Did you know that the house had two keys?"

"Not then."

"But your sister did?"

"Probably."

"And finding the only key, as you supposed, gone, you flew to the Moore house?"

"Immediately."

"And now what else?"

"I found the door unlocked."

"That was done by Mrs. Jeffrey?"

"Yes, but I did not think of her then."

"And you went in?"

"Yes; it was all dark, but I felt my way till I came to the gilded pillars."

"Why did you go there?"

"Because I felt—I knew—if he were anywhere in that house he would be there!"

"And why did you stop?"

Her voice rose above its usual quiet pitch in shrill protest:

"You know! you know! I heard a pistol shot from within, then a fall. I don't remember anything else. They say I went wandering about town. Perhaps I did; it is all a blank to me—everything is a blank till the policeman said that my sister was dead and I learned for the first time that the shot I had heard in the Moore house was not the signal of his death, but hers. Had I been myself when at that library door," she added, after a moment of silence, "I would have rushed in at the sound of that shot and have received my sister's dying breath."

"Cora!" The cry was from Mr. Jeffrey, and seemed to be quite involuntary. "In the weeks during which we have been kept from speaking together I have turned all these events over in my mind till I longed for any respite, even that of the grave. But in all my thinking I never attributed this motive to your visit here. Will you forgive me?"

There was a new tone in his voice, a tone which no woman could hear without emotion.

"You had other things to think of," she said, and her lips trembled. Never have I seen on the human face a more beautiful expression than I saw on hers at that moment; nor do I think Mr. Jeffrey had either, for as he marked it his own regard softened almost to tenderness.

The major had no time for sentimentalities. Turning to Mr. Jeffrey, he said:

"One more question before we send for the letter which you say will give us full insight into your wife's crime. Do you remember what occurred on the bridge at Georgetown just before you came into town that night?"

He shook his head.

"Did you meet any one there?"

"I do not know."

"Can you remember your state of mind?"

"I was facing the future."

"And what did you see in the future?"

"Death. Death for her and death for me! A crime was on her soul, and she must die; and if she, then myself. I knew no other course. I could not summon the police, point out my bride of a fortnight and, with the declaration that she had been betrayed into killing a man, coldly deliver her up to justice. Neither could I live at her side knowing the guilty secret which parted us, or live anywhere in the world under this same consciousness. Therefore, I meant to kill myself before another sun rose. But she was more deeply stricken with a sense of her own guilt than I realized. When I returned home for the pistol which was to end our common misery I found that she had taken her punishment into her own hands. This strangely affected me, but when I found that, in doing this, she had remembered that I should have to face the world after she was gone and so left a few lines for me to show in explanation of her act, my revolt against her received a check which the reading of her letter only increased. But the lines she thus wrote and left were not true lines. All her heart was mine, and if it was a wicked heart she has atoned"—

He paused, quite overcome. Others among us were overcome, too, but only for a moment. The following remark from the district attorney soon recalled us to the practical aspects of the case:

"You have accounted for many facts not hitherto understood. But there is still a very important one which neither yourself nor Miss Tuttle has yet made plain. There was a candle on the scene of crime. It was out when this officer arrived here. There was also one found burning in the upstairs room, aside from the one you professedly used in your tour of inspection there. Whence came those candles? And did your wife blow out the one in the library herself previous to the shooting, or was it blown out afterward and by other lips?"

"These are questions which, as I have already said, I have no means of answering," repeated Mr. Jeffrey. "The courage which brought her here may have led her to supply herself with light, and, hard as it is to conceive, she may even have found nerve to blow out the light before she lifted the pistol to her breast."

The district attorney and the major looked unconvinced, and the latter, turning toward Miss Tuttle, asked if she had any remark to make on the subject.

But she could only repeat Mr. Jeffrey's statement.

"These are questions I cannot answer either. I have said that I stopped at the library door, which means that I saw nothing of what passed within."

Here the major asked where Mrs. Jeffrey's letter was to be found. It was Mr. Jeffrey who replied:

"Search in my room for a book with an outside cover of paper still on it. You will probably find it on my table. The inner cover is red. Bring that book here. Our secret is hidden in it."

Durbin disappeared on this errand.

Catarrh

Is a constitutional disease.

It originates in a scrofulous condition of the blood and depends on that condition.

It often causes headache and dizziness, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, affects the vocal organs and disturbs the stomach.

It is always radically and permanently cured by the blood-purifying, alterative and tonic action of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

This great medicine has wrought the most wonderful cures of all diseases depending on scrofula or the scrofulous habit.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best cathartic.

CHAPTER XXIV.

I MADE my way to the front door, but returned almost immediately. Drawing the major aside, I whispered a request, which led to a certain small article being passed over to me, after which I sauntered out on the stoop just in time to encounter the spruce but irate figure of Mr. Moore, who had crossed from the opposite side.

"Ah!" said I. "Good morning!" and made him my most deferential bow.

He glared, and Rudge glared from his place on the farther curb. Evidently the police were not in favor with the occupants of the cottage that morning.

"When is this to cease?" he curtly demanded. "When are these early morning trespasses upon an honest citizen's property coming to an end? I wake with a light heart, expecting that my house, which is certainly as much mine as is any man's in Washington, would be handed over this very day for my habitation, when what do I see? One police officer leaving the front door and another sunning himself in the vestibule. How many more of you are within I do not presume to ask. Some half dozen, no doubt, and not one of you smart enough to wind up this matter and have done with it."

"Ah! I don't know about that," I drawled, and looked very wise.

His curiosity was aroused.

"Anything new?" he snapped.

"Possibly," I returned, in a way to exasperate a saint.

He stepped on to the porch beside me. I was too abstracted to notice; I was engaged in eying Rudge.

"Do you know," said I, after an instant of what I meant should be one of uncomfortable suspense on his part, "that I have a greater respect than ever for that animal of yours since learning the very good reason he has for refusing to cross the street?"

"Ha! What's that?" he asked, with a quick look behind him at the watchful brute straining toward him with nose over the gutter.

"He sees farther than we can. His eyes penetrate walls and partitions," I remarked. Then, carelessly and with the calm drawing forth of a folded bit of paper which I held out toward him, I added, "By the way, here is something of yours."

His hand rose instinctively to take it; then dropped.

"I don't know what you mean," he remarked. "You have nothing of mine."

"No? Then John Judson Moore had another brother." And I thrust the paper back into my pocket.

He followed it with his eye. It was the memorandum I had found in the old book of memoirs plucked from the library shelf within, and he recognized it for his and saw that I did also. But he failed to show the white feather.

"You are good at ransacking," he observed. "Pity that it cannot be done to more purpose."

I smiled and made a fresh start. With my hand thrust into my pocket, I remarked without even so much as a glance at him:

"I fear that you do some injustice to the police. We are not such bad fellows; neither do we waste as much time as you seem to think." And, drawing out my hand with the little filigree ball in it, I whirled the latter innocently round and round on my finger. As it flashed under his eye I cast a penetrating look.

He tried to carry the moment off successfully; I will give him so much credit. But it was asking too much of his curiosity, and there was no mistaking the eager glitter which lighted his glance as he saw within his reach this article which a moment before he had probably regarded as lost forever.

"For instance," I went on, watching him furtively, though quite sure from his very first look that he knew no more now of the secret of this little ball than he knew when he jotted down the memorandum I had just pocketed before his eyes, "a little thing, such a little thing as this," I repeated, giving the bauble another twist, "may lead to discoveries such as no common search would yield in years. I do not say that it has; but such a thing is possible, you know—who better?"

My nonchalance was too much for him. He surveyed me with covert dislike and dryly observed:

"Your opportunities have exceeded mine, even with my own effects. That petty trinket which you have presumed to flaunt in my face—and of whose value I am the worst judge in the world, since I have never had it in my hand—descended to me with the rest of Mrs. Jeffrey's property. Your conduct, therefore, strikes me in the light of an impertinence, especially as no one could be supposed to have more interest than myself in what has been for many years recognized as a family talisman."

"Ah," I remarked, "you own to the memorandum, then. It was made on the spot, but without the benefit of the talisman."

"I own to nothing!" he snapped. Then, realizing that denial in this regard was fatal, he added more genially: "What do you mean by memoran-

BRIEF MENTION

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered By The Way Side

—Diphtheria relieved in twenty minutes. Almost miraculous. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. At any drug store.

—A dangerous counterfeit $20 United States treasury note has been put in circulation in the western part of Pennsylvania.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox says she is leading a "rushed, jammed, triple life." Col. John J. Joyce is engaged settling the confession to music.

—The air in the sub-way of New York is to be analyzed to discover if it contains enough oxygen to support life on a trip from the city hall to Harlem.

—Energy all gone? Headache? Stomach out of order? Simply a case of torpid liver. Burdock Blood Bitters will make a new man or woman of you

—The President is going to Missouri to visit the eighteen Republican electors whom he corralled there. He calls it going to see the Purchase Exposition.

—Christmas this year falls on Sunday, but according to the law in Pennsylvania, Monday, this being the day following the legal holiday of Christmas, is the proper day to keep.

—"Little Colds" neglected—thousands of lives sacrificed every year. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup cures little colds—cures big colds too, down to the very verge of consumption.

—Aaron C. Shaffer, son of Henry and Judith Shaffer, died October 10, at Elkhart, Ind. Deceased was born at Madisonburg in 1861, where he is well remembered by the older residents.

—The election returns fail to show that Union Labor had the smallest influence on the result. As far as can be ascertained the "organized" working man hurrahed for Parker and voted for Roosevelt.

—During 1903-4 Italy produced 86,119,700 gallons of olive oil. Much of the crop was abandoned because of its abundance. Pure olive oil hereafter should be cheap and plentiful in America.

—The furniture of Daniel J. Sully, the cotton bull bankrupt, was recently sold at auction in New York city. It brought but $7,000. A lot of Oriental rugs went for $1,250. A poster of a black cat sold for $169.

—It is a little remarkable that the cold summer of this year should have produced so fine a corn crop as the country is blessed with this fall. It has always been thought that hot weather was a sine qua non in corn growing.

J. B. Taylor, a prominent merchant of Chriesman, Texas, says: "I could not eat because of a weak stomach, I lost all strength and ran down in weight. All that money could do was done, but all hope of recovery vanished. Hearing of some wonderful cures effected by use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure.

—It is just sixty years since the first telegraphic message was sent from Washington to Baltimore. Now more than a million messages are sent over the wires every twenty-four hours. In 1903, for all countries, the enormous total was 364,848,474. Great Britian leads with 92,471,000 dispatches and the United States comes second with 91,391,000 annually.

—A farmer in Deerfield, Pa., has raised 37,500 bushels of white potatoes on a farm of 150 acres. Value $20,000. He used 100 tons of fertilizers and half a ton of Paris green to kill potato beetles. The total cost of the crop was $7,000 and the profit was $13.000. That is better than being a Supreme Court Judge or a Cabinet Minister, so far as salary goes.

—The Countess of Warwick recently made an address in Manchester, England, at the opening of an exhibition of handicraft. She said: "Given conditions of life with presupposed justice for all and privileges for none, and the joy of working should be an essential part of the joy of living." The Countess is a Socialist, and her words will be read with interest by the growing Socialist party in this country.

—Hunters should be careful about starting fires in the woods. Last week in Blair county one set fire to a hollow tree to drive out a squirrel. The woods caught fire and the flames spread all over the surrounding territory and the populace worked over three days and nights fighting the fire. And all this damage and trouble was caused by one man trying to smoke a little squirrel out of a hollow tree.

—Frank A. Vanderlip recently said in an address to bankers' clerks, that he believes American bankers are a class not well educated. They fail to comprehend the underlying principles of finance. He thought English bankers are better informed. He said there should be journeymen bank clerks, or tramp bankers, going from city to city, to obtain full knowledge of its trades. He would also have commercial high schools. He added that there are many more vacancies in the vice presidencies of banks than at the adding machines.

—The Orthodox Jews intend to erect a large synagogue in Johnstown next year

—What's the secret of happy, vigorous health? Simply keeping the bowels, the stomach, the liver and kidneys strong and active. Burdock Blood Bitters does it.

—Some of our monied people could not have a better benefaction to the town and themselves to look into more small manufacturing enterprises, especially as we are assured prosperity for years to come.

—We are selling at 40c per gallon the finest all sugar syrup that has ever been sold in Bellefonte at that price. Other grades on about the same basis. Maple sugar and maple syrup. Saratoga potato chips. Sechler & Co.

—There was a cobbler in the Old Bay State,
Who made good shoes both early and late.
He stuck to his last, and shod men's feet,
And now he will sit in the Governor's seat.

—Fine lemons, ripe, juicy fruit at 15c, 20c, 30c, and 40cts, per dozen. The finest fruit we have ever sold at these prices in July or August. Fine oranges at 30c, 40c, and 50c, per dozen. Fine bananas and pine apples at very reasonable prices. Sechler & Co.

—President Roosevelt acts promptly if not precipitately. He will recommend to Congress a revision of the entire tariff schedule and hopes that the Philippine tariff will be revised and corrected without any delay. Secretary Taft evidently has the President's ear.

—Lord Rosebery, in a recent speech in England, said he would leave recreation out of a working man's club program, "because mankind needs no incentive to recreation." He also said: "None of us read enough, none of us think enough, many of us talk too much."

—Daniel Krader, of Coburn, was lucky on Monday morning in shooting a two-pronged buck which weighed 115 pounds when dressed. Mr. Krader, in company with a number of other hunters, had started early in the morning en route to Price's camp in the Seven mountains, and had not gone far until he landed the fatal shot. It is reported the party saw three more deer at the same place.

—Several nights ago when Mrs. Thomas Cryder was going to her home a short distance below Woolrich she was attacked by an animal, supposed to be a wild cat, as she was passing C. H. Rich's deer preserve. The animal sprang at her face, but she screamed frantically and succeeded in keeping it off until John McCloskey, who lives near by, hearing her cries, opened the door and the light from the lamp frightened the animal away. Mrs. Cryder was unhurt, but very much frightened.

—Even if Mark Twain is silent, the rumors of the campaign and the Roosevelt landslide bubble up from the great American public Says Gov. Bates, of Massachusetts: "All is lost save the $3.50 shoe." Another defeated candidate says: "There must have been two Roosevelts to get so many votes." A dyed-in-the-wool old-time gentleman says it was a mistake to pass over Grover Cleveland. The President had waited in vain at the White House for dispatches from Watson, Swallow, Debs, Miles and Schley. Mr. Cowherd says "A fire drill is what the Democrats needed." All the women suffrage states went solid for Roosevelt. They are against race suicide. Ex-Senator Hill wants to know if anybody put a bar of iron into Judge Parker's life-preserver?

Business Places Should be a Credit to the Town.

That the exterior appearance of a merchant's place of business is an important factor in the life of trade, is settled beyond question.

"Birds of a feather flock together" is an adage which can be adapted to inadequate objects as well as to life subjects, and one would naturally infer that if a man's front door step was clean and tidy, the rest of the building would be the same—and nine times out of ten the inference would be correct.

Why is it that a passerby is always attracted by a home which from the outside looks cosy and inviting? For no other reason than that it draws upon his sympathies. So it is with the modern place of business—except instead of expecting to draw on a man's sympathies only, the merchant must in turn depend upon sympatby to loosen the purse,

Your store is the home of your business, therefore make it cosy and inviting; plan and arrange so that it will bear the same relation to the community at large during working hours as your own home does to your circle of friends out of business hours.

If you walk along the street and take particular notice you can see many an enterprising and inviting business store, which the owner can be proud of, for they are a credit to the town. Bellefonte is comparatively a small town, but she claims some fine business houses. Any one interested can examine the many stores and business places and draw their own conclusions, and it would be wise for some to follow these business men's ideas

A Good Complexion.

"Sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks restored by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers," so writes S. P. Moore, of Nocogdoches, Tex. A. certain cure for biliousness, constipation, etc. Small pill—easy to take—easy to act. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

A Fashionable Woman's Confession.

"Did nobody ever tell you that in some far prehistoric time I was in love with my husband?" said Mrs. Romaine, carelessly. "Well, I was. I used to go to afternoon services in Lent and pray for that love to last, because the sensation was so much to my taste. I used to have ecstatic feelings when his foot was on the stair, and I sat sewing little baby clothes. We lived in a plaguish way then; $3 spent in two theatre tickets was a tremendous outlay; and we walked out to dinners—I tucking up the train of my best gown under a long cloak, and laughing if the wind snatched it away from me at the corners and whipped it around my feet. Then he grew richer, and we broadened the borders of our phylactery, and then—how—when—dear knows if I can remember, we grew farther and farther away from each other. Now, when he is at home, I am aware of it, because he is there behind a newspaper; but that is all! When our lips meet it is like two pieces of dry pith coming together. I know nothing of his affairs, nor he of mine. I have money in abundance. Money—money—who cares for money when a man's heart and soul and brain have gone into it?"

Sad Case.

Allen Walen and wife, of Robertsdale, Huntingdon county, were conveyed to Huntingdon and lodged in jail pending an investigation as to their sanity. Walen is a Frenchman and has been a miner at Robertsdale, being quite prosperous. For a few weeks the wife has been acting strangely and the neighbors have been on the lookout that no harm should come to the six small children. The mind of the husband seems to have been affected also. On Sunday morning the couple burned the clothing of their children and then attempted to burn the children themselves when the neighbors interfered. It took four men to overpower the man and he was taken to Huntingdon with his legs and arms tied and his face covered with blood showing the struggle he had made. The wife caused no further trouble. The children are being cared for by neighbors.

His Real Name.

The original name of the turkey was Oocoocoo, by which it was known by the native Cherokee Indians. It is supposed that our Pilgrim Fathers, roaming through the woods in search of game for their first Thanksgiving spread, heard the Oocoocoo calling in the familiar tones of our domesticated fowl "Turk, turk, turk." These first Yankee huntsmen, mistaking this frightened cry of the bird for its real song, immediately labeled it "turkey," and turkey it is to this day. Much more beautiful and musical was the Indian name "Oo-coo-coo," the notes peculiar to the flock when sunning themselves in perfect content on the river beaches!—Sunset Magazine.

A Long, Cold Winter.

The hornets are building their nests close to the ground this fall, which is a sure sign of a long, cold winter.

The sagacious little red or pine squirrel also tells that we will have a severe winter by the fact of his working early and late to lay in a large store of nuts to keep his snug home in a hollow tree, safe from the ice blasts of the outside world. The present drouth which is continuing late into the fall is another omen of a hard winter season, which generally results when cold weather sets in during a long dry season.

Square With the Government.

Two years ago H. M. Sherrod resigned from the position of postmaster at Charlotte. He was checked up and his successor installed, and that closed the affair, to Mr. Sherrod's thinking. But the other day he got a formidable looking document from the postoffice department inclosing a check, drawn with all the elaborateness that would mark a draft for $2,000,000, for the sum of 2 cents A final checking up of his accounts had shown that he overpaid the government in that amount.—Kansas City Journal.

Lincoln and Roosevelt.

Theodore Roosevelt is as striking an expression of American opportunity and inspiration as was Abraham Lincoln. Lowly birth and extreme poverty was as ineffectual against the rise of the one man to power and great usefulness as inherited wealth and high social connections were against the rise of the other. Character in its best estate told in both cases. The one man surmounted all the obstacles of his station and the other all the temptations of his Hard work and lofty ideals explain the achievements of both.

People cured of lame weak and aching back, kidney weakness and urinary troubles never tire of letting others know about the remedy which did it; Doan's Kidney Pills. The cures are permanent cures, as people who were cured years ago now testify. Here is a case of the thorough working of Doan's Kidney Pills here in Bellefonte.

James Rine, carpenter, of 239 High Street, says: Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in 1879 and the statement I made for publication at that time recommending this remedy was a true statement and stands good today. I therefore have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills again. I was so weak before I took the first dose that I could not put on my shoes and was hardly able to drag myself around. There were severe pains all through my back and down into my limbs. During all the years since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me I have not been troubled in this way. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a good many people and have sent many sufferers to F. Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper

He should have shuffled off at the beginning.

A great many business men today are committing business suicide at the wrong end of their lives

They mean well at the start, but drift away from their good resolutions.

One means of a long and prosperous business life is to have good printing and stationery.

A business is judged by its reading matter.

Cost is a secondary consideration when you consider the quality—sufficient it is to say our prices are so reasonable that it would be a waste of shoe leather to look further.

It has a distinctiveness all its own—a something that distinguishes it from the common trash of the ordinary shop.

IN A JUST CAUSE.

Twenty years ago, during the memorable Blaine-Cleveland campaign, the Irish World, under the editorship and management of Patrick Ford, espoused the Republican cause as an advocate of the principle of protection to American industries. Ever since that time this great newspaper has been upholding that policy and battling consistently from year to year for the advancement of the cause.

During the campaign just closed the Irish World did splendid work for the Republican candidates and in support of the platform, and the Democratic hull was penetrated many times during the season by its telling broadsides. Its influence was far-reaching and the truths it expounded brought many Irish-Americans to the Republican party where, after experiencing the benefits of the lesson, they will no doubt remain.

The Irish World is the best paper of its class in the country. It has always been true to the cause of Ireland and has done more than any other journal to advanced the interests of the island and create a healthy American sentiment in behalf of the down-trodden people.

LOOK BACK AND SEE.

Just look back over the day and see where your energy has gone. See how much of it has leaked away from you in trifles. Perhaps you have wasted it in fits of fretting, grumbling, fault finding, or in the little frictions that have accomplished nothing, but merely rasped your nerves, made you irritable, cripple you, and left you exhausted. You may have drained off more nerve and brain force in a burst of passion than you have expended in doing your real work. Perhaps you did not realize that, in going through your place of business, like a mad bull through a china shop, you pulled out every spigot and turned on every faucet of your mental and physical reservoir, and left them open until all the energy you had stored up during the night had run off. Look back and see whether your scolding, fault finding, criticising, nagging, and what you call "reading the riot act" to your employes, has helped you in any way or accomplished anything. No; you only lost your energy and self-control, your self-respect, and the respect and admiration of your employes.—Success.

Cole---Ewing.

Mr. F. T. Cole, of the Class of 1900, and Miss Mary M. Ewing of State College were united in marriage by Rev. J. O. Denniston at the home of the bride Wednesday evening, November 16. The wedding was a very quiet one owing to the recent death of Mr. Ewing and to the fact that Mr. Cole was unexpectedly called home from his duties as tutor in Mathematics and as special student in Biology.

The many friends of these two young people will be delighted to hear of their marriage. It is the culmination of a love affair begun while Mr. Cole was in college, where by his natural ability as a student he took many honors. The bride as well may be praised for her fine personal qualities, and she will no doubt be the happy mistress of a well-regulated home. This paper takes pleasure in extending congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Cole.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole left Thursday morning for his home, where they will remain for a time.

Notes from the Hunters.

THE ROD AND GUN CLUB.

John Bitner, Ammon Bubb, Joseph Carson, Frank A. Carson, with Homer Breon as cook, went to the mountains Wednesday of last week to kill birds. They are known as the Potter Mills Rod and Gun Club.

According to the best information at hand, up to Wednesday, they had killed some thirty birds.

KILLED 180 POUND BUCK.

A five-pronged buck, weighing one hundred and eighty pounds, was killed Saturday by Emmet Jordan. Others in the party, all from Colyer and vicinity, were: John Weaver, John Zerbe Jr., Fred Brown, John Wert and J. J. Jordan. The killing was done on Thick Head mountain. The hunters had gone out for a day's hunt and, of course, needed no camp.

PHILADELPHIANS KILL GAME.

Philadelphia sportsmen come in for a good share of large game taken from the Seven mountains. a message over the telephone stated that bags contained four deer and one bear, a picture of the game being offered as proof. The Philadelphians who participated in this hunt were John H. Glasgow, a Vine St. hotel proprietor; Thomas F. Farner, a main line mail agent; Frank and Samuel McCoy; Clayton McKinney and Wm, Shandelmier, of Altoona; Wm. McKinney, Perry Krise, Louis Faust, Warren Slack, of Potters Mills.

REPORT FROM SUGAR VALLEY.

Deer seem plenty on the mountains surrounding Sugar valley. Monday Aaron Kleckner shot a 200 pound buck and Jasper Bower, Charles Omels, Chester and Edgar Schwenk each killed one, and Tuesday W. G. Berry nipped the life out of a four pronged buck which weighed 161 pounds. Webb Kerstetter sent a bullet through a fine bruin, but did not succeed in killing it. Never since the days of the early settlers have deer been so common in the Larry's Creek region as they are this year. The fact that fifteen deer have been killed in the radius of 20 miles has become well known and the region is alive with hunters.

DEER, BEAR AND BIRDS FALL BEFORE PENNS VALLEY HUNTERS.

Game of all kinds fell before the guns of the Penns valley hunters who scoured the irregular mountains that constitute what is known as the Seven mountains. The game seems rather plentiful, but the deer, bear and birds bagged by the various hunting parties and individuals is scarcely up to the number recorded last year.

The Bradford hunting party, the third generation now participating, camped for two weeks along Slate ridge. They have a splendid camping equipment, and when around the hearth are a jolly good set of fellows as can be attested by Samuel Shoop and the writer, who enjoyed the hospitality of the hunters for a part of two days. One would scarcely expect it, but the visitors to the Bradford hunting camp found the table ladened not only with the necessaries of life, but with all the dainties imaginable.

A short distance south of the camp, under a clump of evergreens, was the spot that appealed most to the instinctive hunter—it was the place where on gambrels hung two deer and a fine black bear.

The deer were killed by Philip Bradford, of Linden Hall, and George W. Glace, of Centre Hall, and the bear by Albert Bradford, Pine Grove Mills.

The party consisted of the following:

George Bradford, Frank Bradford, Philip Bradford. Clyde Bradford, Albert Bradford, Dr. J. K. Hosterman, J. C. Kuhn, C. W. Slack, J. F. Smith, George Glace, Wm. Homan, John Coble, Charles Neff. Isaac Shawver, John Knarr, Domer Emerick, cook. E. W. Crawford and Wilbur Kerstetter, visitors; H. McD. McCue, F. C. Beecher. The latter two were from Ford City.

During the past four seasons this party killed fifteen deer and one bear, a record of which they can be very proud.

THE REGULARS.

Another hunting party that has established a reputation in years gone by are the Regulars, of Potters Mills. The hunting season never goes by without some large game finding its way to the "cooler," and this season three deer stand to their credit. Their camp, at which they spent ten days, is located on Sand mountain (east of Foust's place) designated more definitely as the "Stone Spring House." The party consisted of John Wilkinson, Harry Wilkinson, David C. Bohn, S. W. Johnson, J. D. Boal, Mike Coyle, Lloyd Smith, R. W. Colyer, Thos. Decker, W. H. Workinger, J. S. Auman, Jas. S. Reish, Sydney Reish.

Those who had the good fortune to kill the deer were Thomas Decker (one) and Mike Coyle (two). Mr. Coyle is from Rosemont, a suburb of Philadelphia, and is a sportsman who observes the game laws. It was his good luck to kill the deer in close succession and it was only to avoid a violation of the law that the third deer was allowed to escape.

of the prominent part her sons have played in the different wars in the country's history, the Governor said, in closing:

Now it only remains for me to say to you that I am pleased to be with you, to see the wonderful success of your institution here, and to say, further, that this great commonwealth, which has always treated you with kindliness and generosity, will not forget in the future the liberal treatment which your merits deserve. (Great Applause.)

EXTRACTS FROM THE ADDRESS OF MR. SCHWAB.

Pennsylvania is great by reason of her industrial achievements. The boys of the Pennsylvania State College are the men of the future, upon whom devolves the duty of maintaining Pennsylvania's supremacy. (Applause.)

I want to say to you, as one who has had experience, that it is a pleasant occupation. To me there is no greater pleasure than the conceiving of a machine or a project or a process and the building and the carrying out of the same. As our good old friend, Capt. Jones, expressed it, no music so sweet in the world as the whirr of the mechanical wheels. You will find more pleasure, my dear young friends, especially these engineering friends, in this work than in making all the money in the world; even though your fortune be as great as Mr. Carnegie's. (Laughter. Applause) I am sure that there are none of you, if you do reap as rich and as great a fortune, that will not be just as generous with it after today as he has been with his. (Laughter)

The brightest minds in the world directed in one single channel will never accomplish very much but, when rubbed up against a great many people, those bright minds take the best thoughts from all and the best results are thus attained.

I hope this hall will be the great central meeting place of this great student body, where an interchange of ideas will result in the ultimate development of all. Even the geniuses will be improved by contact with their less favored brethren. (Laughter. Applause.)

There is one thing more that I wish you students would never forget and that is that the man who is a graduate of a great institution of this sort is in no higher plane socially than the boy who has received his education in the practical university of the world, the workshop. (Applause.) You have the advantage of the boy who has been in the university of the workshop but, if you will realize that your social status is the same and will use the same application, the same assiduity, you are bound to eclipse him and you are bound to succeed.

EXTRACTS FROM ADDRESS OF MR. CARNEGIE.

"It was twenty years since I was here and I feel like Rip Van Winkle, after he had slept twenty years. To come and see what we have seen today has impressed Mrs. Carnegie and myself very deeply. This is a great evolution. This Farmers' High School, I find, has now nineteen courses, embracing all subjects of human knowledge. Twenty years ago I found 170 students here. Today there are between 700 and 800 and the cry is 'still they come.'

The evolution which education has undergone in that time is very striking. The monastic and cathedral schools of the Middle Ages have passed away. Metaphysics and logic, over which the world fought, have been relegated to the rear. Let me pay a tribute to the ancient classics. They were the medium through which our knowledge of literature was obtained.

"Now what I want to say how proud I am standing here today, to see the State College of Pennsylvania one of the pioneers in the reform of education. Your President tells us that the English course is unusually complete and thorough and that this may be taken as the general character of the education of this institution. He says, we teach American literature first.

"I want to speak of my feelings on this occasion. Old memories have been stirred. If my foot be not on my native heath this moment, I yet stand upon the first soil where with my parents I found a home in this Republic. If Scotland be my mother-land, then I tell you Pennsylvania is my wife-land by marriage. It was an early marriage; I was only 11, but I tell you, gentleman, I am not at all concerned about the question of divorce which is just now agitating the Episcopal church. I never mean to be divorced from Pennsylvania and I never mean to let Pennsylvania divorce herself from me.

"I congratulate you, Mr. President, upon the presence of the Governor here today. I judge that he has been sleeping as I was, (Laughter) and that he has awakened to the fact that of all the appropriations that he approved none is capable of performing more lasting good for his state than that for the State College.

"Now, Mr. President, and gentlemen of the faculty, one word more of deep and sincere congratulations to you. The one solid foundation upon which can be erected a society marching ever upward is the universal education of the people. How noble, then, your vocation and that of your fellows that you are laying well and deep the foundations upon which human society alone can rest, that will march ever upward, ever onward, a march to which no end can be assigned.

"It remains for me to perform the ceremony of handing over this library to you, Gov. Beaver, as President of the Board of Trustees, and this I do in the earnest hope, nay the confident belief, that year after year it must be of greater usefulness to the students of this university; with the hope that, in communing with the teachers of mankind that you may not only become educated men, but that there may be implanted in you the fruitful harvest of high ideals from which, gentlemen, we expect you to ever press upward to the truest of all wisdom, the best, and what is test of the best: That one may render previous service to his fellows, to his state and to his country.

General Beaver, I hand you this key. Take it, sir, from one who loves Pennsylvania, who loves State College, who loves the people of the United States and who would serve them all well. (Great Applause).

PRESENTATION OF LOVING CUP.

In presenting the loving cup to Mrs. Carnegie, Mr. Saunders, of the Senior class, was the spokesman for the students and made the following address:

"Ladies and gentlemen:—

"Possibly jealous of the part allotted to their faculty and others on this dedication day and not content to rest merely as onlookers, the students of The Pennsylvania State College wish to show in some material way their appreciation as sharers in the benefits to be reaped from the gift of our benefactor.

"Not wealthy in worldly goods, we cannot show our good will and delight on this occasion by hands heavy laden with rich and costly gifts but, as we lack in this, so much the more do we wish to add to the spirit that marks our movement. We would have that spirit bespeak manliness, culture, truth and courage, so that our need of tribute, though small in material worth, may be large as an expression of gratitude.

"As a body of young men, eager for the possibilities of life, we have studied Andrew Carnegie's life. We have learned of his start as an humble weaver's helper and telegraph messenger, from which position, by the strength of his indomitable courage and perseverance, he rose to the pedestal upon which he stands today, a leader of men. His influence has been felt in every part of the country. Our business industries, in their development, have felt the touch of his hand. Vast, almost incomprehensible organizations, have grown and lived under the stimulus of his keen brain and enduring will. Our nation, itself a potent factor in the civil and useful arts of the world, owes him a tribute for the part he has played in her industrial growth. Having attained his power, he sets aside the temptations to selfishness and personal comfort and gives to humanity a vast share of his resources and wealth. At the same moment he furnishes us and every American, young and old, a brilliant example of generosity and fidelity to mankind.

"In the triumph of the man, we know that his loving wife and helpmeet has borne a part. We know that her mind hand and steadfast faith have had an influence in this work of human love and, as we stand here today in this building, now our own, we know that it is a part of her gift. To you, Mrs. Carnegie, we present our tribute. On this, your first visit to our beloved College, we wish you to know the good feeling and the delight we have in your presence among us. We want to place in a permanent form some appreciation of the deep sense of gratitude we feel to you, as the helpmeet of our benefactor.

"We ask you, therefore, to accept this loving cup, representing the appreciation, the thoughtfulness, the admiration and affection of the students of the Pennsylvania State College." (Applause)

Mrs. Carnegie was very much touched and responded as follows:

"My ambition in life is to be the silent wife of my husband, the silent partner, to hold up his hands as far as I can and help him to do his work in the world, but out of the fulness of my heart I am obliged to speak today and tell you how deeply I thank you for this very great and unexpected honor you have conferred upon me. I thank you very warmly." (Applause)

Lost Lincoln's Overcoat.

New York, Nov. 21.—Seeking damages for the loss of an overcoat that belonged to Abraham Lincoln, Alexander Freeman, a negro, 90 years old, has brought suit for $300 in the First District Municipal court, Brooklyn, against a local express company. The coat was lost in transit.

Freeman who was a slave before the war, escaped and fled to washington. He became a servant in the White House and since 1864 has jealously guarded as a treasure an overcoat that President Lincoln presented to him.

Judge Walsh will be asked to place the value of the coat, which is the only point at issue between Freeman and the express company.

Academy Defeats Altoona High School.

The Academy football team went to Altoona on Saturday and defeated the Altoona High school eleven before a large and enthusiastic crowd by the score of 17-0.

The Bellefonte boys outclassed their opponents at every point, holding possession of the ball almost the entire game.

The Academy played three substitutes, Hallie Jacobs playing quarter, while Johnny Weaver, the star quarter of the team, played full back in professional style.

Had the Academy not been so confident she could easily have added two more touchdowns to her score.

Helman played a beautiful game at center, supported well by every man on the line. The rushing of Roelofs, Weaver and Gutelius was irresistible, long runs around, the ends and big gains through the line being frequent.

The line up is as follows:

Altoona		Academy
Knebler	center	Helman
Burket	right guard	Broughton
Earnest	right tackle	Stine
Davis	right end	Dobarry
Fay	quarter	Jacobs H
Robinson	right half	Gutelius (Capt)
Dalton	full

Referee—Dr. Howell; Umpire—McCoy.

Touchdowns—Weaver 2; Roelofs, 1, Goals—Gutelius 2.

Time of halves 20 minutes and 15 minutes.

The Academy will go to Bellwood on Thanksgiving and play the crack Athletic team of that place.

The Academy defeated the Bellwood team here by a score of 5-0

The Williamsport High school team defeated the champion New York school team of Elmira on Saturday by a score of 6-5. The Academy held Williamsport down to a 10-0 score on Nov. 12th, not a point being scored over the first half.

Will It Pay?

This question, in these times, precedes every undertaking. It is a wise, natural and proper question, It is foolish to run great risks—to go ahead without being sure you are right.

Do you ever think to ask, when about to buy medicine.

Will it pay?

Am I running any risk?

In no kind of investment is it more important that these questions be answered right,

If you are not feeling well,—have no appetite, cannot sleep, feel tired and dragged out, or if you suffer from scrofula eczema, catarrh or rheumatism, we can assure you it will pay to buy and take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It will pay to be rid of the burning and itching of eczema, the pimples, sores and blotches caused by a scrofulous condition of the blood.

It will pay to have the pains of rheumatism cured, and to be freed from all the disagreeable features of catarrh.

It will pay to let this medicine give you the snap and vigor that are requisite for success.

Surely, it will pay to take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

And then, when you get this medicine, you run no risk. Others have done that for you. Others have taken the medicine and found that it pays to do so. It is constantly paying people to take Hood's Sarsaparilla—paying them in renewed health, good appetite, sweet, refreshing sleep, strength, vigor and endurance—the best kind of currency.

It will pay to begin taking Hood's Sarsaparilla today. Try it and see.

Agreeable to Vegetarians.

Vegetarianism is to be boomed by a portion of the medical profession, Some of the doctors have been asking themselves why it should be impossible to impregnate vegetables with the qualities of the drugs used for curing human ills, and they have come to the decision that the plan is entirely practical. It is simply to cultivate plants containing abnormal quantities of certain medicated substances. Experiments with plants grown in soil enriched with hydrate of iron show that they contain a much larger percentage of iron than those grown in natural soil. Instead of the intensely bitter tincture of iron the patient may take the needed amount of iron into his system by eating vegetables from ground permeated with iron. The anti-scorbutic properties of onions will be increased by growing plants in soil especially prepared. People suffering from rheumatism will buy celery raised in ground that has been highly charged with those elements that carry with them a nerve tonic, while dyspeptics will feed on apples whose delicious flavor disguises any trace of medicine will be there. And so it goes through the list of the pharmacopeia, the innovators in medical practice contending that they will substitute a special vegetable market for the drug stores. The idea of making medicine a luxury for the table is sufficiently novel to warrant a trial.

The Thaddeus Stevens Memorial Association.

Senator-elect Col. E. A. Irvin has been appointed representative in Clearfield county of the Thaddeus Stevens Memorial Association of Philadelphia. Its purpose is to see that the memory of the great champion of free school's for free men, and equal rights for all, shall be appropriately honored by the founding and erection of an Industrial School or home, at his home, Lancaster, Pa., where indigent orphan boys can be taught some useful trade.

By his will Thaddeus Stevens left a sum of money for the establishment of an Industrial School or home for poor homeless orphans. The fund now amounts to $75,000. An earnest effort is now being made to raise an additional amount by subscription in order to erect the school as a memorial to the distinguished services in the cause of popular education.

The great speech of Thaddeus Stevens delivered April 11, 1835, is worth reading and ably puts forth the worthiness of the Free School system in Pennsylvania and every child in Pennsylvania owes him a gratitude and not a citizen rejoicing in its liberal institutions, who is not his debtor.

The Memorial Association is a worthy object and all friends of popular education may contribute to its cause by sending their contributions to one of the officers of the Association who are as follows: President. Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, Lancaster, Vice-President, Wm. W. Greist, Lancaster.; Secretary, M. E. Brenner, Witmer; Treasurer, John A. Landes, Millersville.

Novel Journey Against Death.

Two picturesque characters, attired in outlandish costumes and bearing the marks of a long journey, were in Tyrone Saturday, and attracted the attention of a large number of people by their strange outfit. They were Michael G Harmon, a young attorney, and C. A. Heineken. While claiming Virginia as their home, they are on their way from San Francisco to New York, having started last February to make New York before Christmas, The conveyance, which looked as if it might fall to pieces at any moment, hauled by three shaggy little burros, which go by the distinguished titles of Grover Cleveland, Teddy Roosevelt and Carrie Nation. Harmon, who is highly educated and of pleasant address, is a sufferer from pulmonary trouble, and he undertook the freak journey in the hope that the open air would benefit his health. Heineken, who has traveled all over the world, is acting as traveling companion to Harmon. The two sleep in the open and subsist on what they can get from the people in the different places they visit. They sell souvenir buttons.—Tyrone Herald.

The bride and groom were accompanied by Miss Harpster, of Warriorsmark, as bridesmaid and Mr. Corl, a brother of the groom, as best man. Two small Misses, Mary Homan and Naomi Stover were also members of the bridal party.

After the ceremony a fine dinner was served, and in due time the young couple started off to make a few short visits among relatives for their wedding trip.

Both bride and groom are highly respected young people, with hosts of friends who wish them well.

Turkey Starts Fire Which Destroys Barn.

A turkey gobbler was the cause of a destructive fire near Liberty, in the upper part of Lycoming county, Wednesday night.

Farmer Edward Washington set his lighted lantern on the floor just inside the open barn door while he went into the fodder loft to throw down feed for the cows. A large gobbler, that was roosting on an apple tree just outside the door, saw a chance to get shelter, and flew through the door. His wings struck and overturned the lantern, which ignited a pile of straw.

Before Washington could get down from the loft the flames were beyond control, The barn and the season's crops were destroyed, entailing a loss of $4,500

A Runaway.

Messrs. J. H. Weber and Fred Weber of Boalsburg, who were working as painters at State College, had a runaway Tuesday evening while on their way home from work. Their horse, rounding the corner between the Lytle properties about a mile from the College, shied and ran away, throwing both Messrs. Weber from their open buggy to the ground. Mr. Fred Weber was severely cut about the face. His companion started in pursuit of the horse but had to give it up and attend, with others attracted to the scene, to the injuries of his companion. Kind friends helped them home. It took six stitches to close a cut in Mr. Fred Weber's face.

STATE COLLEGE.

At a recent meeting, the Advisory Committee of the Station approved a plan presented by the Director for an experiment upon the necessary protein supply of the dairy herd. The herd is to be divided into two lots as nearly alike as practicable on the basis of their records. One of these lots is to be fed a ration which, it is computed, will supply, in addition to the protein required for the maintenance of the body, an amount approximately equal to that which they may be expected to produce in their milk. The other lot will receive a ration made up of the same feeds, but in different proportion, so as to contain about twice as much protein. In addition to the regular herd records of milk production, samples of feeds and milk will be taken for check determinations of protein. The experiment will be continued through the winter.

The Committee also authorized a continuation of the experiments which have been conducted for the past two years upon the influence of shelter upon the food consumption and gains of fattening cattle.

THE AMERICAN HUSBAND.

His Obedient Nature Excites the Wonder of Foreign Observers.

An extraordinary reason for separation from her husband was that given by a Colorado woman in applying to the courts. It was that her husband, by his unvarying obedience, made life too monotonous for her. This recalls the familiar criticism of foreigners that the average American husband is "too good" to his wife. In English households St. Paul's sterling words on the subject are still quoted with approval, and the elimination of "obey" from the marriage service has not even been suggested. There is the saying abroad that to tell the nationality of a couple one has only to observe them entering a hotel dining room, writes Robert W. Jones in the Housekeeper. If the man precedes the woman they are English; if the woman precedes the man they are French; but if they walk side by side they are American. The saying aptly illustrates the truth that nowhere is there greater equality of sexes than in this country. Individual tyrants, both masculine and feminine, there may be, but on the whole men and women have come to an understanding that each has a particular work to do and is not subject, as a sex, to the authority of the other.

It, is a type the American husband possesses more conspicuous than another, it is his tendency to become absorbed in business to the exclusion of his domestic life. It is a tendency which should be combatted. The American husband is made for better things. That he is "good" to his wife we admit. But in the highest sense he is "good" to himself.

MAGAZINE EXPLODED.

The Army Besieging Port Arthur Receiving Assistance from the Naval Force —Brooklyn Tenement Destroyed by Fire.

Tokio, Nov. 21,—6 p. m. Sunday—A dispatch from the army besieging Port Arthur, dated November 19, says:

"During the bombardment this afternoon, a shell from a Japanese naval gun exploded a Russian magazine near the arsenal.

"Our operations against all the forts are proceeding as prearranged from Manchurian headquarters.

"At noon Suday we shelled the Russian infantry engaged inentrenching east of Reiuchiangtun, and also infantry in the rear of the villages causing them to flee in confusion.

"In other directions there is no change to note."

ACTIVITY ALONG THE SHAKHE.

Increasing activity along the Shakhe river seems to indicate the imminence of another great battle. The Russian feints, evidently intended to draw a Japanese attack, are uniformly repulsed.

Army headquarters yesterday received the following report from Field Marshal Oyama's report, dated November 18.

"At dawn Sunday a detachment of the enemy made an attack near Hastingiungtun. They were repulsed by us.

"Since Sunday morning the enemy in the vicinity of Shakhe village have indirectly bombarded our positions with mortars and field pieces. They have effected no damage.

"A body of the enemy's infantry were discovered at Hsiamya and Hsiaoyantzu. We shelled them and they fled in confusion to a neighboring village.

"The enemy have burned Huanglashetzu and villages to the southeast on the right bank of the river Hun."

BROOKLYN TENEMENT DESTROYED BY FIRE.

New York, Nov. 21.—Smothered before they could reach the rear fire escape in a burning tenement building, cape 186 Troutman street, in the Williamsburg district of Brooklyn, twelve persons met death shortly before two o'clock Sunday morning.

The entire families, those of Maranio Triolo and Charles Polognio, are wiped out, the last living member of each being now in a hospital with no hope of their recovery.

The burned tenement house is in the center of a row of three-story tenements extending the length of the block, and was occupied by Italiane.

WHERE THE BODIES WERE FOUND.

All the bodies were found in the rear room of the third floor, and it was evident that all had been suffocated in their effort to reach the fire escape at the back of the building.

The dead are:

The mother and two small children of the Pologoio family, Maranis Triolo, his wife and three children. Marie Ambroslo, and her 18 years-old daughter, Mary Galigoni, aged 18, and Lonaria Grosseppi, aged 30.

—"Have by some surgeon Shylock on thy charge to stop his wounds lest he do bleed to death." People can bleed to death. The loss of blood weakens the body. It must follow that gain of blood gives the body strength. The strengthening effect of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in large part due to its action on the blood-making glands and the increased supply of pure, rich blood it produces. It is only when the blood is impoverished and impure that disease finds a soil in which to root. The "Discovery" purifies the blood and makes it antagonistic to disease. When the body is emaciated, the lungs are weak, and there is obstinate lingering cough. "Golden Medical Discovery" puts the body on a fighting footing against disease, and so increases the vitality that disease is thrown off, and physical health perfectly and permanently restored. It has cured thousands who were hopeless and helpless, and who has tried all other means of cure without avail.

Twenty-one one-cent stamps to cover expense of mailing only will obtain a copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, in paper cover. Send thirty-one stamps if cloth binding is preferred. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

What Greedy Got

Greedy was a strange creature. In the first place he was the only one of thirteen eggs that old Mrs. Speckle was able to hatch.

To say he was ugly would be but poorly to express it.

His head was like a duck, for he was at first a duck's egg. But his tail was wonderfully like Mrs. Speckle's. His feet were like paddles on a steamboat, and his appetite was enormous. His poor mother did so much scratching in the garden to satisfy his greed that they shut her up in a coop.

"See what you have brought me to by your greediness," said his poor mother.

POOR BILL GAVE UP THE CHASE.

But he only grinned and gobbled all the corn placed before his mother's coop.

"You needn't scold," he cried. "You show her lover that she loves him. She can show it by being considerate of his wishes, by taking a wholesome and rational interest in his work, by evincing sympathy in any hobby he pursues and by quietly and insensibly influencing him for good. Besides these, there are many other almost impalpable methods by which a modest woman can let her lover see that she loves him. To understand and appreciate these methods thoroughly one should be a lover. It is like brushing the bloom off a butterfly's wings to try to tabulate or clearly explain them. Indeed, it cannot be done. Words, idle words, are not the vehicle by which shy young girls show their feelings. And how can a mere outsider understand such signs as the hoisting of the red flag of love, telltale glances, down dropped eyes and averted face?—London Queen.

A Policeman's Testimony.

J. N. Patterson, night policeman of Nashau, Ia., writes, "Last winter I had a bad cold in my lungs and tried at least half a dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians before getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and two-thirds of a bottle cured me. I consider it the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world. For sale by C. M. Parrish.

Who is Katharine Ridgeway?

This is what Charles C. Kenney, chairman of the entertainment course of the P. R. R. Y. M. C. A., of Philadelphia says: "The Katharine Ridgeway Co. has appeared regularly on our course for the past six years, and our people look upon it as the annual Star attraction. Personally I consider this Company one of the strongest lyceum attractions extant. The work of Miss Ridgeway being especially worthy of the most enthusiastic praise. I would not consider any Star Course complete that did not include this company.

The Star Course in Petrikin Hall opens Dec. 2nd. with this company, each artist of which is a star. Course tickets to five entertainments $1.50. We appeal to our people to aid the committee in bringing these fine attractions, remember the young people in your families will share in these course entertainments. The influence of which will tend to lift them into the realms of more beautiful thoughts and living. Help the W. C. T. THE EBYS RELIEVED OF $1000.

Haines Township Farmers Robbed of a Bit of Their Hoard.

The one thousand dollars stolen from Michael and Henry Eby, last week, represents only a small portion of their supposed hoard. The Eby brothers live in Haines township, one mile northwest of Woodward, are good, clever, honest farmers, own a half dozen or more of the best farms in that section of Penns Valley, but have a decided penchant for hoarding money—coin, currency, notes, check, or any evidence of wealth.

It is said banks and the Ebys are practically strangers, although, perhaps, they do not mistrust these institutions, but their hoarding is inbred—beginning when the senior John Eby migrated from Lebanon county to the fertile hills of Penns Valley.

The exact sum taken from the Eby home is not exactly known, but from the best calculations, made by the brothers who sustained the loss, it is one thousand dollars. In the same room from which this cash was taken, and near by in a drawer, lay undisturbed several thousand dollars, according to a statement made by one of the Eby's to a close friend. The robbery was perpetrated while the brothers, who are bachelors, were partaking their evening meal in a summer house. The one thousand dollar check dropped at the foot of the stairs was discarded, it is supposed, rather than lost in haste. The robbers left no clue and every one is at sea as to who the robbers were, where they came from, or where they went.

On more than one occasion, when a farm was purchased for four, six or eight thousand dollars, the Eby brothers needed only to go to the various improvised tills secreted in their dwelling, fields and mountains, lift the ready cash and make the whole payment at once.

These brothers are honest and honorable in their dealings, are men of very few words, suspicious of the glib-tongued stranger. They indulge in very few luxuries, attend closely to their farm work, and while they are not recluses they prefer their own simple home to the outside world.—Centre Hall Reporter.

—So rapid was the voting in the second precinct of the twelfth ward at Reading that at one o'clock in the afternoon the ballot box was completely filled and an appeal was made to the court to permit the use of a large tin bread box with a pad lock and a slit in the lid as an improvised ballot box. The request was granted, and after an hour's delay voting again proceeded.

50,000 Trees Destroyed.

State Economic Zoologist H. A. Surface reports that 50,000 peach trees which had been shipped into the Cumberland valley for sale by a New Jersey nurseryman have been confiscated as the trees were thickly covered with San Jose scale.

Recently the department decided not only to inspect the state nurseries, but also to inspect trees shipped into Pennsylvania from other States. It was in pursuance of the latter duty that an official discovered the carload of 50,000 diseased peach trees, and they were promptly confiscated and destroyed.

It is believed that much of the San Jose scale was imported into this state by unscrupulous nurserymen of other states who wanted to get rid of their bad stock, and a careful watch will be kept hereafter.

—Judge Stewart in a recent decision said in reference to the right of way that pedestrians came first, then vehicles, buggies, etc., and then the automobile. It should be remembered that pedestrians have the right of way on regular street crossings and corporations and drivers of any kind of vehicles may be legally stopped to allow persons to cross from one side of a street to another, but persons should always cross at street crossing. Should any one be injured in crossing a street any other place than a regular crossing the risk is their own no damage can be collected.

—About 12 o'clock Tuesday night Nov. 15th. the plant of the Mosbannon Manufacturing company at Philipsburg was destroyed by fire. The plant and machinery, valued at about $8,000 or $10,000, was owned by a stock company, composed of a number of well known citizen whose loss will be partially covered by insurance. John Botwright, who has for a short time been operating the plant, and building up a very successful business, suffers a loss on stock etc., of about $5,000, with an insurance of $3,000. There was also considerable loss to the superintendent of the wood department, and the owner of tools in the plumbing and steam fitting department suffered some loss. The fire started in the boiler room, but just how it originated is not known.

—The extremely low condition of the mountain streams will result in a scarcity of trout next year, unless plenty of rain soon comes, for the animals of the forest, especially 'coons, find little or no difficulty in catching and feeding on the finny tribe. Wednesday night a number of hunters in the east end of Sugar Valley captured two 'coons. While dressing the animals the next day, large numbers of trout were found in their stomachs.

"When I commenced taking your medicines, eighteen months ago, my health was completely broken down," writes Mrs. Cora L. Sunderland, of Chaneyville, Calvert Co., Md. "At times I could not even walk across the room without pains in my chest. The doctor who attended me said I had lung trouble, and that I would never be well again. At last I concluded to try Dr. Pierce's medicines. I bought a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' took it, and soon commenced to feel a little better, then you directed me to take both the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and the 'Favorite Prescription,' which I did. Altogether I have taken eighteen bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' twelve of the 'Favorite Prescription,' and five vials of 'Pellets.' I am now almost entirely well, and do all my work without any pain whatever, and can run with more ease than I could formerly walk."

CENTRE COUNTY TEACHERS

Closing Session of the Fifty-Eighth Annual Institute.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

An Interesting Program with Eloquent Instructors—A Full Turnout of Teachers—Complete Report of Proceedings.

THE INSTITUTE CLOSED FRIDAY.

WEDNESDAY P. M. SESSION

Prof. Koch held the first period of the session and elaborated on his subject of yesterday "Motor Ability" reducing a number of technical terms to the vocabulary of the common people. The Instructor need not have given himself the slightest concern because the oh'ms and volts, amperes, &c, of a difficult and delicate subject were not understood. The fault was not with Prof. Koch nor the authors from whom he quoted. It is the subject alone that was at fault, if any fault there were.

Dr. Schaffer's afternoon talk was devoted to the question "What Shall We Teach." Boiled down it meant above and beyond all the "ologies" "nature studies" and kindred mysteries, teach the three "R's." It is not the object of the school to teach the trades. The little woman who teaches a dozen little children in a country school house is greater than the Cattle King who fixes the price of meat throughout the United States. Civilized life began with alphabetic writing, there are a few exceptions to that but they are few. The primary mission of the school is to teach reading and writing. The school which fails to do so, though it may teach all about an elephant and butterfly, fails of its end. By this the Doctor did not mean that the course of study should be limited to the "Common" branches but as the basis of all education he placed, as does every instructor not afflicted with a "fad," reading, writing and arithmetic.

It is a pleasure in these days of "progress," reaching beyond the ken of an "admirable crichton" to find the instructors of teachers getting down to "bed" rock, "hard" pan or any old geological formation that will give the teacher and pupil a small space on which to stand and call it terra firma. And yet with all this common sense talk the makers of alleged school books are the only objects that flourish possibly, excepting the willows growing o'er the graves of "Ossgood" "McGuffey," "Cobb" and many of the idols of a boyhood half a century old.

Here let us remark in the capacity of a reporter of facts, that the modern Reader, that is the book itself, is as barren of the soul stirring classics of English and American literature, as the butterfly is of substance or the elephant of physical beauty. Where can you find "Thanatopsis," "Marco Bozarris," "The Seminoles Defiance." Websters reply to Hayne, "Hamlet's soliloquy" The Battle of Culloden. The American Flag, Cato's soliloquy and a hundred selections that were in the readers of by gone days; selections that thrilled the souls of the school boy or girl? We can point you to a series of text books in use in this county which does not even define the ordinary pauses, used in and absolutely necessary to intelligible reading and writing.

To geographies which would put to blush a parent if he read their silliness, to histories which, in which a whole page of reading would discover a bare fact worth remembering, to spelling books in which the vocal and consonantal sounds are only given incidentally. More, while we are in a critical mood, to numbers of pupils from 12 to 16 years of age who cannot read intelligibly, a passage from the scripture or an article from a paper or magazine; more than that, this fact is recognized by the parents, and has been called to the writers attention. Of spelling we say little for most any child can spell a word in the English language, in at least two ways and can get along. English orthography, like man, is "fearfully and wonderfully made." There is nothing like it in the Heavens above in the earth beneath, or in the waters under the earth and so may be worshipped without violating one of the Commandments.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS.

Officers for 1904 and 1905. President, ——Yearick; vice president, Miss Mary Meyer; recording secretary, Miss Mame Bell; ass't. sec'y, Miss Zoe Meek.

NOTES.

Prof. Davis, Sup't. of Blair county is a visitor at the Institute.

There is no flagging of interest in the Institute either on the part of the teachers or the general public; so the instructors find inspiration in the large audiences which greet them.

Drs. Stetson, Schaeffer and Rupp, the latter a new face to many, held the morning periods, and with Prof. Meyer's musical numbers the session passed pleasantly and profitable. The session of Friday morning will begin at 8:30 a. m., sharp and at 10:30 those who desire to do so, will have an opportunity to attend the functions at State College.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

The first period was taken up by Dr. Rupp on "Training Pupils how to do Good." The Doctor did not believe in the old theory that the child was born with a mind utterly blank, but on the contrary that it was born with embryonic possibilities for good or evil, vice or virtue. That none is moral or virtuous, but through the exercise of his will and not through his inclination. His talk was very interesting and his auditors appreciated his remarks.

Dr. Schaeffer occupied the second period, speaking of the Penna., display at St. Louis, he said 50 marks of distinction had been awarded to Pennsylvania. It was determined to bring the State exhibits to Harrisburg to show what the people of the Commonwealth are doing in every line. Referring to the State Capitol Commission and the abuse which had been heaped upon it in the past, by the newspapers, he said they were not now troubled with criticism, but are up against a proposition which required the help of the teachers. There is to be a hall of Fame in the new capitol and who of the great Pennsylvanians are to be represented? The question has been raised as to whether the hall of Fame should be reserved for native Pennsylvanians? This is too narrow a view for the Doctor and his auditors will agree with him. He thought the time had arrived when history should be written from the stand point of Pennsylvania and not from that of New England. This thought was in the Doctors mind because of the paucity of information on the great men of the state, found in our histories. The Doctor voiced a sentiment inborn, cultured, but which had as yet died e're fruition. The innate modesty of the sons and daughters of the grand old Commonwealth has kept them silent while others have been proclaiming their glory from the housetops.

Let us give to the teachers of Centre county, a cold bare fact and they shall clothe it in their most beautiful language. It will still fall short of her deserts. Her children are taught, with their faith, varied as it is absolute, unqualified devotion to the Union first, then to the State, true blue are her daughters, staunch and true are her sons.

No son of Pennsylvania ever hauled down or shot at the flag that "Betsy" (our sweet little "Queen Bess") Ross gave form and substance to, under the guiding hand of the Father of his country. In the hall of Fame "greatest of State Superintendents" and member of the Capitol Commission, Dr. Schaeffer forget not our only "Queen Bess." Place her there, in the position of Honor, representative of the highest type of womanhood, a daughter of Pennsylvania, and when you have done that, you typify American womanhood which sends her sons to death on the field of battle and crucifies her daughters on the altars of her country, that all people under the "broad stripes and bright stars" of the uncrowned queen "Bess" may find "Virtue, Liberty and Independence."

How our hearts thrilled at the great record of our state, as presented by Dr. Schaeffer, our quaker modesty keeps us silent, while the blood of our sons has been shed on every battlefield from Bunkerhill to the far off Philipines.

Greatest of all the glories as a heritage to a son is the Pennsylvania woman, mother, sister, daughter, sweetheart, we all rise up and call them "blessed."

No need to teach the child of the State which gave birth to the "Star Spangled Banner" patriotism; only to keep its exuberance confined within greater bounds.

Thanksgiving Week at Fair Includes Visit From Roosevelt

St. Louis.—Thanksgiving week at the World's Fair will be rounded off with a visit from President Roosevelt, Vice-President Elect Fairbanks and members of the Cabinet on Saturday, November 26. More than a score of colleges and universities have accepted invitations to participate in the exercises planned for the six days and the season will be enlivened by many social functions, athletic events and special ceremonies.

On Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, November 24, all business will be suspended in St. Louis and the populace will join in the exercises at the World's Fair. Appropriate services will be held in observance of the event at Festival Hall and in the afternoon a football contest will be waged on the Stadium grounds between the Haskell Indian School team of Lawrence, Kan., and the Washington University eleven of St. Louis.

For the six days of Thanksgiving week there will be a relaxation from study and an opportunity given to students and teachers to pay a final visit to the Exposition. The period will be one exceptionably favorable for an educational rally and carnival of college sports and amusements, such as is planned.

No Haste on Tariff,

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—No decision yet by the President and the Republican leaders regarding possible action of Congress on the subject of the tariff. It can be said authoritatively that no decision will be reached as to such action either at regular or at an extraordinary session of the Fifty-ninth Congress until the subject has been considered thoroughly by the President and his cabinet and his political friends in Congress.

The president is not bound by any preconceived views on the subject and is open to conviction as to the most desirable course to pursue. He is not inclined to favor an extraordinary session, either for the purpose of taking up the tariff or any other subject, but it is said to be too early yet even to indicate the determination which eventually will be reached.

Mothers Praise It.

Mothers everywhere praise One Minute Cough Cure for the sufferings it has relieved and the lives of their little ones it has saved. A certain cure for coughs, croup and whooping cough. A L. Spafford, Postmaster, of Chester, Mich., says: "Our little girl was unconscious from strangulation during a sudden and terrible attack of croup. One Minute Cough Cure quickly relieved and cured her and I cannot praise it too highly." One Minute Cough Cure relieves coughs, makes breathing easy, cuts out phlegm, draws out inflammation, and removes every cause of a cough and strain on lungs Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

—Foley's Honey and Tar is peculiarly adapted for chronic throat troubles and will positively cure bronchial diseases. Refuse substitutes. For sale by C. M. Parrish.

Results of Advertising.

It is a mighty hard thing to down any man who advertises. About the only Democrat in Massachusetts who was elected is W. L. Douglas, the famous shoe man, who was elected to the office of governor. He was so thoroughly advertised and for so many years that it was impossible to down him. George L. Peck, the author of "Peck's Bad Boy," was once elected governor of Wisconsin because his name had been so thoroughly advertised, and that being followed by the election of the famous shoe man is enough to convince the most skeptical that it pays to advertise.

Physicians Prescribe It.

Many broad minded physicians prescribe Foley's Honey and Tar, as they have never found so safe and reliable a remedy for throat and lung troubles as this great medicine. For sale by C. M. Parrish.

More Engines Sent East.

The shortage of motive power on the lines of the Pennsylvania railroad is becoming very serious and as the shops all along the line are taxed to their utmost capacity, the company has been compelled to send nine more engines to the Baldwin Locomotive Works in Philadelphia for general overhauling and repairing. These engines were sent East from Altoona yesterday.

Keep Your Nerve.

When your nerve is gone you are in bad plight to buck against the duties of life. Courage, bravery, enthusiasm, energy—all these are merely other names for nerve force. When your nerves get "shaky" and weak you are another person mentally, morally and physically. By the loss of nervous force people lose more than health; they lose the very essence of perfect manhood and womanhood. Nerves can be kept strong by proper nourishment. Vin-te-na cleanse the blood and warms it. When the blood is rich and clean the nerves are fed and made steady and strong. Vin-te-na cures every form of weakness and disease due to feeble nerve force. If you are not in prime condition take Vin-te-na the medicine that keeps you well and gives you 100per cent of nervous energy.

The structure cost $145,000, and in it were $75,000 worth of furnishings, the most valuable of which were portraits of all former Missouri Governors and Supreme Judges. These cannot be replaced.

—The Liberty bell passed through Tyrone Saturday on its way back to Philadelphia from the St. Louis exposition, where it has been since last spring.

—Jesse Edmiston, son of William Edmiston of Hawk Run, Clearfield county, a lad who recently rounded out his sixteenth year, shouldered his gun Friday and went out to the woods in quest of game. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon a big doe crossed his path, and taking aim like a hunter of many years' experience Jesse pulled the trigger and the deer bit the dust. The deer tipped the beam at 170 pounds, so the lad met Hayes Burnham and went thirty pounds better.

—The doors of the new DuBois National bank were thrown open for business Monday morning.

—A new process for manufacturing an artificial building stone from infusorial earth, called bulirolit, has recently been patented by the firm of Jencquel & Hayn, of Hamburg, Germany. —A model of an apparatus for the automatic closing of quick-firing guns will be presented to the Department of War by Alberto Jimenez, major of artillery, of Mexico. The model will be submitted to a commission of military engineers and artillery men, who will see whether the apparatus should be adopted in the Mexican artillery.

—The cone on the crater of Mount Vesuvius which formed during the late eruption fell into the crater on November 1 with a tremendous roar. There immediately ensued an explosion that figuratively shook the mountain, followed by the emission of an immense black column, which gradually spread, falling in the form of ashes over the surrounding country within a radius of twenty-five miles. The disturbance lasted but a short time.

—Has the New York World left the Democratic party and ceased to be its leading organ? It says editorially "The American people will never accept the dictum that a negro scholar is the inferior of a white ignoramus, that a negro gentleman is the inferior of a white blackguard that a man's title to consideration rests on the color of his skin, and not on his character and his achievements. The World hopes that this little lesson has finally been thoroughly learned."

—A Mrs. Hardman, who makes her home with the Rev. Dr. A. Essick and wife, Chambersburg, a woman aged over 80, met with a peculiar accident on Sunday. Her set of false teeth broke in two and one half slipped down her throat into her stomach. She is too old to stand an operation but it is hoped that the lodgment of the teeth in her stomach will not cause serious trouble. Mrs. Hardman is well and favorably known in Bellefonte being a sister of Mrs. Daniel Rhoads of West Linn street, at whose home she has frequently visited.

—A telephone arrangement by which a person speaking may also see the face of the person at the other end of the line has been invented by J. B. Fowler, of Portland, Oregon. How far it will be possible to see the faces over the wire is yet to be demonstrated. To the observer appears an apparatus much resembling the front end of a large camera. There is also a telephonic transmitter. To see over the wire one puts his eyes to the tube, which corresponds to the lens of a camera.

—Star course 1904-05. The season opens Dec. 2rd. with The Katharine Ridgeway Concert Co. Morning Republican, Findlay, Ohio—Without a peer. That is the best criticism that can be made of Katharine Ridgeway. In her recital last night at the Marvin she completely captured the audience, which went into ecstacies in its appreciation. One could write columns on her work and then not say too much in praise of her. Suffice it to say once again, that she stands undisputedly without a peer. Tickets for course of 5 entertainments only $1.50

—The eleventh annual meeting of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers will be held at the new Hotel Astor, Forty-third street and Broadway, New York City, on January 17th, 18th and 19th, 1905. The meeting will be held in College Hall, which has been placed at the disposal of the society by the hotel management, which has also given assurance of a reasonable charge for rooms and service to members and guests of the society who stop at the hotel during the meeting. W. M. Mackay, secretary of the society, will issue the official call for the meeting in the near future

—The promptness with which the President punishes wrong-doing, insubordination and unprofessional conduct in office, illustrated by the recent dismissal of three judges in Alaska, whose integrity was called in question, a clerk in the postoffice department, and a surgeon in the army, who, being a married man, professed to be single, is only equaled by the hearty endorsement and encouragement he gives to those who have served him and the public well. Those in the employ of the Executive branch of the government know by this time exactly what to expect from President Roosevelt. Witness the two letters from his hand this week called forth by the resignation of Pension Commisioner Ware, and Col. Hecker one of the engineers of the Panama Canal Commission. The letter to Mr. Ware, in which the President tells him he knows of no other man who has ever conducted the great bureau so economically and with such a satisfaction to all concerned, is a stunning rebuke to those who have indulged in carping criticism at the Commissioners expense, owing to some little eccentricities of his personality. It is doubtful if any other public servant ever received such a glowing letter of commendation and friendship from any President.

—Rev. D. J. Davis will preach in the U. B. Church at Paradise on next Sunday at 10 30 a. m. instead of 7.30 p. m.

—It is said that Congressman Solomon R. Dresser has recommended Jno. Gowland to be postmaster at Philipsburg.

—On Tuesday Mr. Henry Detweiler, a teacher in attendance at the county institute, was hastily summoned to his home in Smullton owing to the serious illness of his wife.

—The Daughters of the King held a sociable in the basement of St. John's Episcopal church on Tuesday night to all the women and girls of the Parish, it was a most enjoyable affair.

—We are selling at 40c per gallon the finest all sugar syrup that has ever been sold in Bellefonte at that price. Other grades on about the same basis. Maple sugar and maple syrup. Saratoga potato chips. Sechler & Co.

—The Womans Guild of St. John's Episcopal church will hold a turkey dinner and sale of fancy articles in Petrikin Hall on Thursday Dec. 1st from 5 to 9 o'clock. Tickets 50 cents including ice cream.

—The thirteen State Normal schools in Pennsylvania will ask the next legislature to increase their biennial appropriation from $20,000 to $40,000. This was decided at a meeting at Bloomsburg Friday of the trustees and principals of these schools to discuss the legislation which they will advocate at the next session.

—Appearance indicate that the President intends to have a Cabinet of comparatively young men. The rumor that Senator Spooner would be made Attorney General may be disposed of by the fact that that position has been offered to Ex-Gov. Black, of New York. But as his law practice is worth $100,000 annually it is hardly probable that he will take the place at a salary of $8,000.

—It is the opinion of politicians in Washington that no extra session of Congress will be called; that the President will not now propose any legislation looking to a decrease of representation to the House on account of the disfranchisement of the negro vote in the south. There are reports to the effect that in due time the President contemplates making a tour of the south

—James Carter, the colored man who was arrested at Clearfield several months ago for complicity in a murder committed in Cumberland Md., two years ago, and who was convicted of manslaughter in the Allegheny county Maryland, court two weeks ago, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. The Clearfield witnesses who attended the trial thought Carter would be acquitted.

—Dr. Metchnikoff, of the Pasteur Institute, is somewhat put out by the publicity given to his theory regarding old age and its cure—that old age is due in a large measure to colonies of vicious microbes in the large intestines. He points out, however, that birds are much longer lived than mammals, being fortunate in the lack of that obnoxious organ. The learned professor is of the opinion that science will soon give man the chance of a tranquil, normal old age. The longer a man lives, the longer he desires to live adds the doctor.

—The new roundhouse of the Pennsylvania Railroad company in East Altoona was opened Monday. It is an immense building, having been erected at a cost of $1,500,000 and is one of the best equipped roundhouses in the country. It contains 52 stalls and is one-fourth of a mile in circumference. In it will be housed all of the freight engines of the Altoona yards and the middle, Pittsburg and Cresson & Clearfield divisions. Hereafter the passenger engines will be housed at the old Pittsburg division roundhouse, as the middle division roundhouse, is to be abandoned.

—One of the most important discoveries ever made by the Department of Agriculture is the fact that the common legumes—"pod-forming" plants such as peas, beans, clover, alfalfa, vetches, etc., may be successfully fertilized by the use of nitrogen fixing bacteria. The process consists in inoculating the seed, or the soil, by using the culture fluid which is filled with the bacteria. The Department gives instructions for making this fluid. Dr. George T. Moore is the man who has succeeded in making the discovery practical It has long been known that on the roots of the plants named are numbers of rounded bulbs, called nodules, the habitation of millions of microbes which are continually absorbing nitrogen from the air and converting it into food for the plant. Dr. Moore discovered how these germs can be discovered and multiplied and finally distributed with the soil or seed, infusing nitrogen into the life of the plant. The Department is now sending out free to all applicants millions of the germs packed in cotton, with directions for use. A large number of orders are coming from California, where the planting of trees and alfalfa is in progress, with the intent of enriching the soil for citrus fruits. After sowing the land with the bacteria it has been known to increase the yield of potatoes 50 per cent., oats 300 per cent., wheat 46 per cent. and cotton 40 per cent. Those writing to the Department for the bacteria should state the time of planting, the kind of seed and the amount to be treated.

William Brouse, of Philadelphia, was in Bellefonte visiting his cousin, Mr. R. S. Brouse and family. It is about thirty years since the two men saw each other and then they were both boys, but when they met on Monday there was that familiarity about both of them that led to mutual recognition. Thirty years is a big lapse of time, but the two Brouses did not so much discuss what transpired in the three decades as they recounted reminiscences of their boyhood days at Ogontz when both were Sunday school scholors in Mr. Jay Cook's class.

Last Thursday morning Master Richard Brouse, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Brouse, departed for Philadelphia to join the crew of the schoolship Saratoga, on which he was enrolled a cadet. Dick arrived in Philadelphia all right, went down to the water front and there got bewildered and could not find his ship. He wandered around aimlessly an hour or more then gave it up and went back to the Broad street station where he took the train for home arriving here the next morning. And now Dick has concluded that he will forego the joys of a sailor for the more peaceful pursuits of a merchant and so can be found behind the counter of his father's store.
